The AI Revolution in Music: 50,000 Tracks a Day Hit Deezer as 97% of Listeners Can't Tell Human from Machine

The music world is shifting fast as Deezer reports that more than 50,000 AI-generated tracks are uploaded every day, reshaping how music is created and distributed. According to a Deezer-Ipsos survey, 97% of listeners were unable to distinguish between songs created by humans and those generated by artificial intelligence in blind listening tests. This development is prompting discussion around transparency, rights management, and how platforms should label synthetic content as AI continues to blur creativity and authorship.
